Poker Under the Gun: The War on Gambling rolls on

After firing the first shots on April 15, the U.S. government continues to escalate its War on Gambling.

Besides denying bail to an alleged poker payment processor in a move dryly described as "overkill", the United States' online poker crackdown is also scaring a lot of states and districts into re-evaluating all their gambling laws, online and offline.

And starting today, CAP is offering a special three-part series on how affiliates can move past Black Friday. That and more in our latest Black Friday review:

Moving past Black Friday: What's next for U.S. poker affiliates?

First in our three-part series (continuing tomorrow and Wednesday), CAP recently spoke to some industry experts to try to figure out what U.S. poker affiliates should do now. Read on.

War on Gambling updates in Nevada, D.C., Massachusetts

State leaders in Nevada are getting close to their own online gambling laws as other districts struggle with concerns over the U.S. online poker crackdown. Keep reading.

How "Black Friday" in 2011 is different than 2006, and what it means for affiliates

The "Black Friday" actions of the U.S. government in 2011 aren't the same as the UIGEA-related prosecutions in 2006. What's that mean for affiliates? Find out here.
